

Marcus, 170 New Bond Street, London W1.

Marcus Margulies isn't boasting when he says "Our store carries more tourbillons and minute repeaters than any other in London". He's merely stating fact! Margulies who has spent his entire life in the watch business, retains his enthusiasm for fine timekeepers, but his standards are now so elevated that he's only truly excited by the rarest, most exotic pieces. Mere bling isn't enough, but tourbillons, perpetual calendars and minute repeaters are.

Marcus has an appreciation for the most complicated watches. Among the store's treasures are probably the largest selections of Franck Muller complications and Hublot Big Bangs in Europe. Extensive stocks of Piaget, Audemars Piguet (the hardest to find Royal Oaks, of course), Urwerk and Greubel Forsey amongst others are offered in tranquil surroundings, including upper floors which offer respite from the bustle of Bond Street. You will also find a backgammon room, a private cinema, and a well-stocked wine cellar. Recently opened is a special room where the most impressive models are displayed in a custom-built Buben & Zorweg wall that winds the watches.

Marcus is a haven for watch enthusiasts, especially those eager to acquire something new and special. As Marcus prides himself in spotting talent, he's often the first to find and support budding watchmaking geniuses. During the past two years, he's added Urwerk's radical models, which eschew hands and dials. The watches in stock, like the store, are simply out-of-the-ordinary.
